A truly unprecedented literary achievement by author and editor Lawrence Block, a newly-commissioned anthology of seventeen superbly-crafted stories inspired by the paintings of Edward Hopper, including Jeffery Deaver, Joyce Carol Oates, Stephen King, Lee Child, and Robert Olen Butler, among many others. Edward Hopper is surely the greatest American narrative painter. His work bears special resonance for writers and readers, and yet his paintings never tell a story so much as they invite viewers to find for themselves the untold stories within. So says Lawrence Block, who has invited seventeen outstanding writers to join him in an unprecedented anthology of brand-new stories: In Sunlight or In Shadow. The results are remarkable and range across all genres, wedding literary excellence to storytelling savvy. Contributors include Stephen King, Joyce Carol Oates, Robert Olen Butler, Michael Connelly, Megan Abbott, Craig Ferguson, Nicholas Christopher, Jill D. Block, Joe R. Lansdale, Justin Scott, Kris Nelscott, Warren Moore, Jonathan Santlofer, Jeffery Deaver, Lee Child, and Lawrence Block himself. Even Gail Levin, Hopper’s biographer and compiler of his catalogue raisonée, appears with her own first work of fiction, providing a true account of art theft on a grand scale and told in the voice of the country preacher who perpetrated the crime. In a beautifully produced anthology as befits such a collection of acclaimed authors, each story is illustrated with a quality full-color reproduction of the painting that inspired it. Illustrated with 17 full color plates, one for each chapter.

In Sunlight or In Shadow: Stories Inspired by the Paintings of Edward Hopper

Edward Hopper is one of my favorite painters and Lawrence Block is one of my favorite authors - seriously, A Long Line of Dead Men really is the worlds best detective novel! - and the two have combined forces with seventeen contemporary writers to produce In Sunlight or In Shadows: Stories Inspired by the Paintings of Edward Hopper. The book is an anthology and some of the authors contributing are Block, Joyce Carol Oates, and Stephen King. Each story is preceded by a photo of the picture by Hopper and a bio of the writer of the piece. I thought all the stories were excellent, but several stick out because they were as plainly written as Hopper plainly painted. One of the best was by Gail Levin, author of several bios of Hopper and curator of collections of Hoppers who writes in the voice of Gail Levin and describes a Baptist minister who was the religious counselor to Edward Hopper, his wife, and his sister in their last years. He used his influence - and not so religiously - to raid the estate after the death of the three Hoppers. Even though several stories mention Hopper, Levins is the only one that uses the man and his life as the basis of a fictional story. Among the other splendid stories were those by Stephen King, who describes the use of a music room and the two people currently occupying it who are waiting...for something you might not want to know. The only stories I didn't care for - not because they weren't well written - were the few that told complicated stories. Hoppers paintings are so simple that the best stories were those that mimicked that sparseness in writing. Now, Im not sure if all readers would feel that way, but I think most readers will appreciate the brilliant juxtaposition of the art work and the stories.
